Initial chat is a starting service recommended for all Blob clients and necessary for any future form of cooperation.

The client can choose to use this service as onetime standalone conversation related to any current situation or topic of interest. It would be conducted with an experienced expert consultants' team that moderates the chat and provides professionally led analytical discussion in order to provide alternate, so-called fresh eyes perspective on clients' situation that can help further decision making or planning process. Basically, this service secures a credible and objective second opinion, on the spot.

In different instance the Initial Chat or specific task related variation of it, is integral initial part of any Blob task. It plays a crucial role as an introductory discussion between potential clients and our agency. This session serves as a platform for advancing a deeper understanding between the client and our expert consultants, facilitating an exploration of potential areas of collaboration and establishing a foundation for a successful partnership. By engaging in this introductory conversation, both parties have the opportunity to articulate their respective expectations, discuss potential scopes of cooperation and align on a mutually beneficial model of working together. The Initial Chat thus serves as an entryway, not only offering a fresh perspective on current situations but also laying the groundwork for a productive and harmonious future collaboration between the client and our agency.

This service is only charged if it is a standalone provision. In case the client and the agency agree on any other model of cooperation the price of Initial Chat or variation of it is included in the service charge for the ordered task or group of tasks.
